Ten Best Tools of All Time

Written By: Harry Gribnitz

It's spring in Michigan!!!! It's time to get the car ready for the season of driving fun. I have been working on my truck this weekend. I gave it that extra special washing to get rid of any trace of winter road salt. I vacuumed both the passenger area and the cargo area. I removed all the "stuff" I found under the seats. That included a little green fuzzy thing from under the back seat. I don't think I even want to know what that was. I took the snowbrush and salt bags out of the back. (On second thought, I decided to leave the snowbrush for a couple of more weeks, it is only May.)

While cleaning out the toolbox, I found a list of the "10 best tools of all time". The list was originally published by the SHO Registry, a magazine devoted to news and information about the Ford Taurus SHO. With a little modernization, I thought you might enjoy the list.

- 1. Duct tape*
- 2. Vice grips ("The heavy artillery of your tool box")*
- 3. Spray lubricants*
- 4. Margarine tubs with clear lids*
- 5. Big roadside rocks*
- 6. Plastic zip ties ("When buying a used car, subtract $100 for every zip tie under the hood")*
- 7. Large standard screwdriver*
- 8. Baling wire*
- 9. Bonking stick (also know as a tie-rod end separator)*
- 10. Cellular phone (or a quarter and a phone booth).*

My truck and toolbox is ready. It's time to hit the road. Now if I can just find me way through all the road construction!
